Like the director's other works, The Great Gatsby is noticeably, unmistakably Luhrmann's and whether or not you believe in his vision is largely dependent on your tolerance of the man's idea of ...Tom's character in Great Gatsby movie vs. book As portrayed in the book, he was a "sturdy straw-haired man..., with a rather hard mouth" whose "arrogant eyes had established dominance over his face" and "not even... his clothes could hide the enormous power of his body". Myrtle, Movie During the process of analyzing the differences between the movies and the books, we found many more differences that we did not originally catch. Besides differences related to societal appropriateness, some of these changes didn't seem to have a concrete purpose However, in the novel, two people show up to Gatsby's funeral: his father and Owl Eyes, who was met earlier in the book in Gatsby's library. In the movie, nobody shows up at all, which adds to the loneliness felt by the audience. This magnitude of loneliness was not felt by the reader, which changes the mood portrayed in the final scenes, as seen in the following clip.
